Loper and Moore receives CCD Certification

Central Electric Power Association Directors Max Loper and Frank Moore have successfully completed the Credentialed Cooperative Director (CCD) Certification. Loper has been a member of the board of directors for the association since 1995 and Moore has been a member since 1993.

To earn the certification, they completed five courses designed to provide basic knowledge and skills required of cooperative board members. The curriculum included Director Duties and Liabilities; Understanding the Electric Business; Board Roles and Relationships; Strategic Planning; and Financial Decision Making.

Loper and Moore are very active in community organizations and activities in Neshoba County where they both reside.

Central Electric General Manager Paul Long stated, "Both Mr. Loper and Mr. Moore are very dedicated to their duties as board members supporting the cooperative principles. They are very interested in providing quality service at the most economical price to all members."

Max Loper represents Neshoba County on the Central Electric board of directors. He is married to Betty Thompson Loper and attends First Baptist Church in Philadelphia. Frank Moore represents Neshoba County on the Central Electric board of directors. He is married to Janet Hardy Moore and resides in the Beatline community.

Central Electric congratulates Loper and Moore on their certification as a Credentialed Cooperative Directors.
